THE STORY

Audrey (Mila Kunis), a Los Angeles Organic-Market Cashier and Morgan (Kate McKinnon), her Righteous Feminist BFF, wind up in the Middle of a High Ballistic Espionage Caper after it turns out that Audrey's Absentee Boyfriend, Drew (Justin Theroux), is a Cutthroat Operative working for the CIA. Things get off to an Impressive Start with a well-staged and well-executed Action-Movie Smackdown.

After an Alcohol-Fueled Night of burning some of Drew's Belongings, Audrey finds him at her Doorstep with Killers on his Trail and a Pair of Bickering International Intelligence Operatives named Sebastian (Sam Heughan) and Duffer (Hasan Minhaj) desperate to reach him. His Cover blown, Drew entrusts Audrey with a "Package" to be delivered to a Contact in Vienna....

OUR REVIEW

The Film is trying to be about Half a Dozen Different Things : a Buddy Comedy, a Spy Drama, a Raunch Fest, a Thrilling Action Film... We get lots of Fun Bits for a Deluge of Character Actors. Gillian Anderson shows up as the big MI6 Boss and her interactions with McKinnon are a Delight. Produced by Brian Grazer and Erica Huggins's Imagine Entertainment and Lionsgate, this Release has Style and Production Value to spare. The Actors are solid, Everybody looks good, the European Locations are lovely and the Genre Trappings are very good.... It's no High Art, but it is Good Fun. The Pleasure is relatively Consistent throughout its 117-Minute Running Time.
